A Historic Opportunity to Address the Climate Crisis

After decades of inaction, governments around the world are finally starting to take significant steps to address the climate crisis. The recent United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP26) in Glasgow, Scotland, was a significant moment in the fight against climate change. At COP26, nations from around the world gathered to discuss and commit to reducing their greenhouse gas emissions. The outcomes of COP26 were a mix of progress and disappointment, but there is hope that the world is finally moving in the right direction. The next steps will be crucial in determining the future of our planet.

A Historic Opportunity to Address the Climate Crisis

Before you fire up the grill, an environmental scientist wants you to consider these eco-friendly tips.

1. Choose a clean grill. Make sure your grill is clean and free of any grime or grease that could potentially contaminate your food.

2. Use a reusable grill mat. Grill mats can help reduce the amount of direct contact between your food and the grill, which can help increase the lifespan of your mat.

3. Grill with a cover. Grilling with a cover can help reduce the amount of time your food needs to cook, as well as reduce the amount of energy used.

4. Use a meat thermometer. A meat thermometer can help you ensure that your food is cooked to the proper temperature, which can help prevent foodborne illnesses.

5. Reduce the amount of meat you consume. Eating less meat can help reduce the amount of greenhouse gas emissions associated with meat production.

6. Use a reusable bottle. Using a reusable bottle can help reduce the amount of plastic waste associated with single-use bottles.

All of these tips can help you reduce your carbon footprint and contribute to a healthier planet.
